

What a night! Poor Damion.

Contributed by Jessica
Friday, 30 January 2009
Last Updated Friday, 30 January 2009

What a day it has been. Normal morning. Normal afternoon. Damion got home at his normal time. Jack was climbing (normal activity) on an end table (sort of normal location). Damion started to come downstairs to stop Jack. Normal still. Damion slipped on the last step and fell to the floor in pain, not normal. Long story short, after an hour at the E.R. the doctor entered the room asking if we knew a good orthopedic surgeon. Damion doesn't really have a primary care physician but we could instantly name an orthopedic. Anyways, the E.R. doctor let us look at and take pictures of the x-rays.

Yup. That's right. He broke his foot in two spots. At the E.R. they put on a splint, wrapped his foot and sized him for crutches. Tomorrow morning after we wake up we'll call the good ortho doctor's office to schedule an appointment for tomorrow. Damion says he's going to need surgery, I'm hoping for something other than that but not too optimistic. Don't worry. I'll try to provide more info as I have it.