Saturday was a beautiful day but it was spent finding a new tv stand, one that would slow the kids down when they wanted to mess with all our components. Sunday was a blah day outside and inside. Today (Monday) was a blah like morning but after naps the kids and I stepped outside to get the mail. After a quick look at the backyard we returned inside for new diapers and out we went again. An hour later we were on our way back inside a bit dirtier than when we left. Anna & I just had a couple of dirty spots on our pants. Jack had a dirty face, hands, pants, shoes, sock, & shirt, oh and the shirt was wet too. Might sound silly but he looked like a little boy who had just had a blast outside. Yes, of course there are pictures of the kids enjoying the fake spring day.

In Damion news, well, his foot isn't as colorful as it has been. He is still in pain but I don't think its as bad as it was. He doesn't complain about pain in general so the only thing I have to base this on is that he's taking over the counter pain meds and not the prescription meds. He has successfully made it through week one of five with his cast and he says he's ready for it to come off now. Since some people get queasy with certain injury pictures I have created an album in the gallery that shows Damion's foot's progress if you guys are interested.

Okay, I know I usually make linky links for you to click to take you to the galleries I speak of but tonight that isn't working too well and I don't want to trouble shoot anything. It's almost midnight. I just want to go to bed. Sorry, but that's just the way this cookie has crumbled tonight.....Cookies?! C is for Oreo....hehehe. OH! It's good to be me! Night all!
