

Damion, Minivans, & Easter

Contributed by Jessica
Friday, 17 April 2009
Last Updated Friday, 17 April 2009

A couple of nights ago I wrote this nice long post to share but haven't gotten around to putting it up. So, here's the summary.....

Damion had his doctor's appointment on April 9th. The bone is 60-70% healed. He has a special ortho boot/shoe thing he can wear. But he got clearance for hard sole shoes (ie dress shoes, bike shoes). Another appointment in 5 weeks.

That same day we started to the mall around 10:30 am to return Anna's Easter outfit and get one she couldn't destroy as easily. Long story short, we didn't get to the mall until dinner time. We went to the Honda dealership and test drove a 2004 Honda Odyssey. We've been talking about minivans for the past three years and the Odyssey since the fall. Well Friday morning we traded in the Jeep for the Odyssey.

That evening we packed it up to go to "gramma's grampa's house" (Anna was a bunch bits of excited about the trip.) for Easter weekend. Thanks to the generosity of my mom, my sister, my bro & Lori, Damion and I had a date afternoon, which was fun.

There are pictures up in the gallery from the weekend and from today. Damion is currently on a business trip so the kids and I spent most of the afternoon at various parks and I took the camera out since we were in our backyard and they couldn't tumble 10 feet to the ground.